Born of the Sea

At the dawn of the 20th Century, Robert Fergusson was a child from Scotland working as a cabin boy on one of the Queen's merchant vessels. As Robert worked his way through the maritime ranks to Captain, one of his duties entailed keeping the ship's brightwork shiny. Virtually anything metal needed Fergusson's constant hard work and supervision, lest the salty sea lay rust on Her Majesty's vessel.

Fergusson discovered that fish oil was the answer to combating rust, and worked feverishly on a galley stove to harness an oil that was both fast-drying and odorless. He tested a variety of his rust-preventive formulas on a fleet of 100 World War I ships and by 1921, Robert had finally discovered what he had searched for since his days as a cabin boy.

In 1932, Robert brought his business to Chicago where, while patching his kitchen floor with linoleum and contemplating names for his fish oil product, young Fergusson realized the Latin word for oil is "oleum". Preventing rust with oil is exactly what his product did, and Rust-Oleum was incorporated.

Born of the sea, Fergusson's best-selling Stops Rust® line established Rust-Oleum as the first American company to market spray paint. By 1957, Rust-Oleum was writing history from sea to outer space – NASA commissioned Rust-Oleum to develop heat-resistant coatings for their missile programs. Today, Rust-Oleum sells millions of cans of paint a year and protects American icons like Denver's Mile High Stadium and the Golden Gate Bridge – as well as patio furniture from coast-to-coast.

Almost 100 years later, Robert Fergusson's spirit of innovation and commitment to quality transcends every product bearing the Rust-Oleum name. Rust-Oleum Corporation is a subsidiary of RPM International, Inc.

Gift o' the sea is the early history of Rust-Oleum. Printed in 1971, it tells the story of Rust-Oleum's maritime roots and the company's rise to become a world leader in rust-preventive coatings.
